

DEAD ROCKY LOUGE FIGHT

Democratic voters in the Senate and at least 100 of the 112 Democratic voters in the House. He has not a majority of the votes in either chamber today, he cannot be elected.

It has always been desired that should Lodge not be elected on the first ballot, meaning the joint ballot tomorrow, he will be defeated.

Lodge Glum at News.
Many Republicans will desert him after the first ballot. They hold the action of the party caucus which leads them to vote for Lodge, does not hold them after the first ballot.

The Lodge men know they are beaten. Senator Lodge himself, in Washington yesterday, received the news of the caucus in gloom. He said Senator Frank. Both received a fair notice of the result, and even the assurance from the new Lodge men that they would support him to the end. Lodge's own law, that some of the Democrats would be in the Senate, and that the only hope of the Lodge men was to win the majority of the Senate.

The only hope of the Lodge men was to win the majority of the Senate. The only hope of the Lodge men was to win the majority of the Senate.

Mrs. Pankhurst Scored 15 Suffragette Boss.

LONDON.—The militant Suffragette leader, Mrs. Pankhurst, scored a victory over the publication of an article in the New York by Mr. Billington, a former president of the movement, in which she makes a scathing attack on the suffragette movement.

Mrs. Pankhurst, in reply, said: "In attacking my long connection with the militant Suffragette movement, I take back from myself that right of rank, from speech which my official position denied me."

She said that the last five years have proved that this suffragette militancy is not revolutionary, it is the exploitation of the very thing for the purpose of advertisement.

Mrs. Pankhurst turned up the committee of the House, assailed the militant suffragette movement, and declared herself ready to fight to the death.

ANKEE GIRL'S DUKE AT WORK

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Society has been supplied with a new thrill in the new duke, the Duke of Vesse, who married Miss Anita Stewart of New York, has gone to work. Dukes who are members of royal families and married to American heiresses and yet follow the daily routine of a life in a London stockbroker's office are sufficiently rare to cause wonder, even in this city.

Whipple Measures Up to Every Standard Required by the State. He Should Be Elected

Massachusetts is fortunate, the Democratic party is fortunate and the Progressive Republicans are fortunate in the unanimous selection of Sherman L. Whipple, distinguished lawyer and Progressive Democrat, to be the Democratic standard bearer in the senatorial contest.

Mr. Whipple MEETS ALL the requirements of the situation. He meets the demands of a great office in great ability. He meets the call to important service by a habit of tireless industry. He meets the opinions of Massachusetts by planting himself SQUARELY UPON THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM indorsed by the people at the last election. He matches Mr. Lodge in general capacity.

As a lawyer he will overmatch Mr. Lodge in the consideration and discussion of those legal and constitutional questions which require a lawyer's art. He whose voice has sounded triumphantly in every court of the Commonwealth in the greatest legal causes WILL NOT FAIL the State when he needs a lawyer's service in the Senate.

The stand-pat Republicans have boasted much of Mr. Lodge's oratorical talents. They are good, but Mr. Whipple's are not inferior. The progressives, Democrats and Republicans, can place their cause in the hands of Mr. Whipple in SUPREME CONFIDENCE that he will break lances with Mr. Lodge without being unseated.

Altogether, in their two conferences, the Democrats of the Legislature have given the State a fine exhibition of true leadership and good sense. Last week, which was the time for discussion, they remained divided, that the discussion might be more genuine and real.

But now, on the eve of the contest, they unite to fight, and under a leader equal to the importance of the contest.

The insurgent Republicans, led by Congressman Ames, are standing their ground bravely. "They are a little band, but LARGE ENOUGH TO MAKE A REVOLUTION," as Wendell Phillips once said.

In the fighting independence of Butler Ames the people can see the lingering of the spirit of his grandfather, old General Butler. His recent declaration of principles would have pleased "the old General" as they pleased most of the people of the State. The insurgents need not be ashamed if he is their candidate. He has qualities of leadership. He has grown in public estimation.

Speaker Walker yesterday took next to the last step of his entire journey toward Progressive Republicanism. He has now declared that he believes United States Senators ought to be elected by a direct vote of the people. His fellow-citizens have watched with approval Mr. Walker's steady advancement upon higher and higher ground. Those Republicans who want Mr. Walker should remind him of Mr. Whipple's statement: "While not seeking public office, I must heed the call to public service."

Champagne Importations Have Fallen Off

That Is a Good Thing—A Good Result of the Alleged Lack of Prosperity

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Business

Foolish geese in the United States in the year 1910 drank about two million five hundred thousand FEWER bottles of champagne than they drank in 1909. To be exact, the importations of champagne in 1909 were 481,777 cases, of twelve bottles each, and in 1910 only 254,475 cases.

This is attributed partly to lack of ready cash among the more foolish element of the population, and partly to the fact that restaurant owners increased the price of champagne from four dollars a bottle on the average to four dollars and fifty cents.

Whatever the cause, the falling off in the use of champagne is an excellent thing for the community. It may be said that many of those that drink champagne habitually might as well ruin their constitution and get off the earth now as later.

But, after all, even the regular champagne drinker may prove to be useful in the future—you remember that Gibbon was well on the road to being a first-class drunkard before he wrote his great "Decline and Fall." So let us give good advice to champagne drinkers, hoping that one of them may be an unrecogized Gibbon or something better.

The ordinary American, when he says "Wine" means to say champagne. And champagne isn't a wine at all. It is a poisonous concoction, invented by the French and manufactured by them chiefly for sale in Russia, in the United States and in England—three countries which know less than any other country about wine and what it really is.

Champagne in large quantities is actually a poison. It destroys the kidneys and other internal organs. The man who drinks champagne makes himself a human vat in which fermentation proceeds—much to the injury of that vat.

The families that own the famous brands and vintages of champagne do not drink the stuff themselves—except in very small quantities. Occasionally a Frenchman at the end of a dinner may take a small glass of champagne, but he considers himself foolish for doing it.

Real wine, intended for human consumption, has nothing whatever to do with champagne. And many unhappy pairs of American kidneys, many poor American stomachs are to be congratulated upon the diminished consumption of champagne, a crude, insatiable, pernicious product.

Do You Save Money? How Much?

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Business

success—of all success—is SAVING—saving money, saving time, saving sleep, saving health, saving knowledge by storing it away in the memory.

Saving money is the foundation of that success which gives a man independence; it means escape from slavery—for the man without money is the slave of the man that hires him, the man of whom he buys, the man to whom he owes, the slave of his own daily needs.

If you have not begun to save, if you have not begun to be a free man, you have not done your duty to yourself or to your family. Of a few words from a wise old man are better than many modern words. Out of this saying of Franklin's, and paste it up where you will often see it:

Save a little out of thy income and thy hidebound pocket will soon begin to thrive, and will never again cry with the empty belly; neither will creditors insult thee, nor want oppress, nor hunger bite—nor will nakedness freeze thee. The whole hemisphere will shine brighter, and pleasure spring up in every corner of thy heart.

The Death of Little Friday

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

"FRIDAY, AGED NINE." Owing to the rotation of the earth on its axis, a ship going around the world from West to East, gains one day, or in other words, must count one day twice in order to keep straight with the calendar. Similarly, a ship going from East to West loses a day in circling the globe, and must drop one day from its reckoning. The change is made when the ship crosses an imaginary line called the date line, which runs from North to South through the Pacific Ocean.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Business. Friday, and had remarked that he was coming on deck the next day. Early that morning several passengers were awakened by a loud cry, and Madame December was seen hurrying along the deck, with disheveled hair and garments, moving toward the captain's bridge.

Anything out of the usual routine always causes curiosity and excitement on shipboard, and soon the decks were crowded with people asking the cause of this disturbance.

Then it was learned that Little Friday, Madame December's son, had nine and his ninth child, was nowhere to be found. He had disappeared from the ship. Madame December, a stout, middle-aged woman, was running to and fro, trying to comfort her. But the poor woman was like one distraught, and day and night might we hear her crying over her lost child.

The fourth girl was Thursday; and she had mentioned the name of her brother, D'CEMBER, dead along the deck. Her look said: "Fooling with me. She gave no heed to call or beck. But moaned, 'My child, my child!'"

Till at the bridge with trembling lip. She wailed, "Oh, Captain, stop the ship. For one has found a watery grave—A precious child of mine. My little Friday, blithe and brave: He was so young, but able. He wandered in his sleep maybe And dropped unconscious in the sea."

"At dawn I called him—no reply; I found his empty bed. I searched the ship both low and high; They say my child is dead. Oh, Captain, turn upon your track. And bring my precious darling back."

So all day long, like one distraught, We heard December cry. As fore and aft, her child she sought. "He was too young to die." And late at night we heard her pine "My little Friday, only mine."

Thrift

How Some Persons Have Amassed Fortunes

SYSTEMATIC saving has been the foundation of several great fortunes. One man, a prominent manufacturer in Massachusetts, used to get every two-dollar bill he received in a pocket in his vest. His wife, of course, extracted them after he had gone to sleep, and when she had accumulated one thousand of these bills she bought a machine coat. In cold weather this proved very useful, as it protected her from the cold. She was a housewife, and used to go to the house. In warm weather the coat was more of a handicap than otherwise, because wearing a machine coat in summer stamps one as either a Central American or an eccentric. Owing to this appearance, the man in question became the manufacturer of a patent hat for bladders. He has now sold $700,000 of these hats to fishermen living in New York and fishing in Massachusetts. From these $700,000 hats a total catch of three bluebladders resulted, one of the fish being caught when the fish was asleep. This patent hat has so encouraged local fishermen that they are all buying the hat.

Another systematic saver was a young man who worked during summer as a life guard. He saved on the average a life a week, and from every three of these he got a present of fifty cents, more or less. With this money he bought a ticket on a steamer to the Virgin Islands, where he could devote his entire attention to work. As a result he is now owner of the principal feed store in the town, where he sells him and eggs at 25 cents a plate.

A city man rented a restaurant one day and ordered a plate of huckleberry pie. He got a present of fifty cents, more or less. With this money he bought a ticket on a steamer to the Virgin Islands, where he could devote his entire attention to work. As a result he is now owner of the principal feed store in the town, where he sells him and eggs at 25 cents a plate.

Making armor plate for the Navy Department is an easy and profitable means of accumulating money. The most economical method is to get a large plate and armor it with a piece of stick.
